HIBERNIANS.

What They Have Been Doing
the Past Week—General
News Notes.

J. Charles Obst is again in the harness. There is plenty of work for the new year.

Con Ford made a happy speech Thursday night. Now look out for Division 2.

Division 2 will meet Sunday afternoon, December 28, instead of Christmas night.

Division 4 will next meet on Sunday afternoon, December 21, instead of Christmas eve.

The spirit that prevailed Wednesday night must greatly encourage those who were visitors.

Four hundred couples participated in the recent social and dance of Division 8 of Springfield, Mass.

The Hall Board will soon be a thing of the past, but their good work will always stand for their honor.

There are now three divisions in Schenectady, N. Y., the new one being organized last month.

McGinn, Reilly and Hellen are able financiers and are determined to increase the resources of Division 4.

Tim Sullivan and Pete Cusick ran a hot race. High office awaits the former, who is always an earnest worker.

The annual bazar of the Ladies' Auxiliary and Division 17 of Lynn, Mass., was more successful than had been anticipated.

James Kenealy has made many friends by his excellent work on the Visiting Committee. Those who are sick can always depend on him.

The Hibernians were successful against strong opponents in winning the flag awarded in connection with St. Patrick's bazar at Valley Falls, Conn.

Division 1 had roll call Tuesday night, and the responses showed the presence of several long-time absentees. They all promised more regular attendance.

The speech of John Barry placing Joe McGinn in nomination was a hot one. Barry is the Papa John of Division 4, and has all the young men with him.

The Kentucky letters to the official National Hibernian were written by State Secretary Meehan. The County Board should reappoint him its correspondent.

That was a representative gathering of Hibernians Tuesday night. Among those present were lawyers, doctors, manufacturers, merchants and workmen, all members of Division 1.

As Secretary of Division 4 Tom Callahan has surprised his most ardent friends. Always on time, his minutes never need correction, and are excellently written. Tom is the right man in the right place.

John Mulloy, who has so carefully handled many thousands of dollars for Division 1, serving as Treasurer for about twelve terms, declined re-election. Tom Walsh, the lawyer, will make a worthy successor.

Division 1 gave an exemplification of real charity Tuesday night, and the hearts of those present felt lighter for having so generously assisted the poor widow and orphan children. Such works make happiness everywhere.

State President Keenan spoke this week for the State Board, urging the incoming officers to further the efforts being made to double the membership during 1903. His suggestion to increase the death benefit to $100 is a timely one, and many have expressed themselves favorable thereto.

Pat Holley, Martin Cusick and Dave O'Connell are eloquent speakers. Their remarks were given close attention Tuesday night and elicited hearty applause. Advice from such men should be heeded. They are right when they say the Ancient Order is not a cheap organization or the place for cheap men.

State Secretary Meehan was happy in his remarks at the meetings this week and his talks were very encouraging. He spoke high words of praise for the retiring officers, and congratulated each division upon the wisdom displayed in the choice of their successors, who are men to inspire confidence in this grand old Irish order.

BACON'S

That's Where Louisville Children Will Find Santa Claus.

Stays There the Entire Day
Amid Toys of Every Description.

READY FOR CHRISTMAS VISITORS.

If there were such a thing in Louisville as a nursery catechism, and the nurse, taking up the book to hear the daily lesson, should ask the class: "Who is Santa Claus?" the reply would probably be something like this: "Santa Claus is the patron saint of good children, and it is he who fills their stockings with nice things on Christmas." And then when the nurse would ask the next question, "Where can Santa Claus be found in Louisville?" the reply would undoubtedly come in concert: "At J. Bacon & Sons, 332 340 West Market street." Then each member in the class who had answered in this wise—and there wouldn't be an exception—would receive a perfect mark.

For the acknowledged headquarters of old Kris Kringle has for years been at Bacon's. He made Bacon's store his rendezvous when it used to be up on East Market street, above Preston, and when the firm built a new house and moved down town Santa just made a new contract with them and paid up his holiday rent many years in advance. He has opened up his pack again for business and can be seen at Bacon's all day long doing the act that has made him famous. He is of unusual size, suggesting that he has had a prosperous year, and that his bounties will be as liberal as his avoirdupois. He is shown in the act of descending into a chimney with a pack on his back and a smile on his face. His dimensions, while huge, are not of a nature to inspire awe in the hearts of the thousands of children who gaze upon him daily. Santa Claus, to the childish mind, is always a great fellow, and the fact that he carries a wand which sparkles with 150 incandescent electric lights and also has electric light bulbs peeping from the snow on his cap, does not seem at all strange to the latter day child, who is thoroughly up-to-date in the matter of progress.

The fact that Santa Claus long ago disposed of his reindeer and now travels exclusively in an automobile does not lessen the juvenile admiration for him. In fact our modern children insist upon a modern Kris Kringle, and only ask of the jolly old saint not to "get into the trust" or to allow the latter-day commercial spirit to adversely influence his generosity. Santa in his new headquarters at Bacon's has a throne in the center of the store, from which he can see and be seen very readily. By throne, it is understood, of course, than his throne is his chimney. Perched upon its top he slowly revolves all day long and allows his twinkling eyes to sweep from one end of his brilliant realm to the other. It is no wonder that his little devotees stand open-mouthed and forget even their mothers as they gaze in admiration upon the idol of their young hearts and the beneficent patron saint of their unclouded Yuletide.

Aside from Santa Claus himself, there is much to look at in his gorgeously appointed stock of holiday treasures which are to be found in lavish profusion at Bacon's. In the first place the great show windows are a source of perpetual delight. Here are shown the marvelous mechanical toys which were made in Germany, France and Austria, and which have come all the way across the sea to find a resting place in Santa Claus' bountiful storehouse at Bacon's. One of these quaint figure represents a fisherman who catches, with admirable patience, almost every known article before he hooks the coveted fish. With pipe in mouth, he sits the picture of resignation, while old shoes, bottles and other vexatious things impale themselves on his hook. He never loses his temper, however, and is finally rewarded by hooking a genuine fish. A miniature of Hermann the Great is also a delightful attraction. The little magician uses a trunk and a woman for all sorts of antics. Finally, when tired of his magic, he points his wand at the woman and, "Presto!" she is gone. The gallant French soldier, whose energetic diltation with a pretty nurse is most engaging, is also one of the interesting mechanical toys to be seen in the wonderful windows.

The entire holiday stock, in fact, which may be seen by visiting Santa Claus' vast emporium in the basement at Bacon's, is one of the most elaborate ever seen in Louisville and embraces the fruits of many ingenious minds in many climes and lands. There is something for every one and all are appropriate to the season of "Peace on earth and good will to men."

GINGER DEWS.

Beat half a cup of butter to a cream; heat a little cup of molasses; add to it half a cup of boiling water; take from the fire; add half a teaspoonful of soda; pour this over the butter; add one teaspoonful of ginger and about one and a half cups of flour, one level teaspoon of cinnamon and one level teaspoon of baking powder; bake in gem pans twenty minutes.

Let men tremble to win the hand of woman, unless they win with it the utmost passion of her heart. Else it may be their miserable fortune, when some mightier touch than their own may have awakened all her sensibilities, to be reproached even for the calm content, the marble image of happiness, which they will have imposed upon her as the warm reality.—[Hawthorne.

THE SALVAGINGS.

whirlwind dancers; the three Ronays, in their famous musical act; the Bison City Quartette; Blossom Seelye, the comic shouter; Bennett and Revere, song and dance artists; Lester and Curtis, Man o' War men; the Waldron Brothers in a novel comedy act, and many others. The scenery is elaborate, the stage effects brilliant and the wardrobe new and handsome. The performance will open with tomorrow's matinee. There will be the usual matinees on Monday, Wednesday and Saturday.

IRELAND.

Record of the Most Important of the Recent Events Culled From Exchanges.

It is believed that the trial of Col Arthur Lynch, M. P. for Galway city, will take place before the Lord Chief Justice of England in January next.

The Sheriff has seized a large quantity of cattle, the property of the defendants in the recent Tallow conspiracy case. He was assisted by a large staff of bailiffs and policemen.

At a meeting of the Sligo District Lunatic Asylum Committee a resolution of sympathy with Patrick A. McHugh, M. P., on his imprisonment under the coercion act, was passed unanimously.

At Barney Patrick Rahilly, Secretary of the Cork Executive of the United Irish League, was summoned for inciting to intimidation. Defendant did not appear and a warrant for his arrest was issued.

The Press Association Athlone correspondent learns from an authoritative source that the extensive estates of Willis Sandford, of Castlereagh, are about to be sold to the Congested Districts Board, with the ultimate view of the transference of the land to the tenants.

The Coroner for Mid-Tyrone held an inquest on the body of a woman, Rose Anne McCann, who was murdered a few days ago outside Trillick, and whose remains were subsequently discovered in a bog hole. The jury returned a verdict of wilful murder against some person or persons unknown.

The Lord Mayor of Cork has received a subscription of $1,250 from the Lord Lieutenant in support of the proposed Cork Exposition next year, accompanied by a letter saying he has no doubt whatever as to the general benefits which an exhibition of the kind is capable of conferring on the Irish people.

The anniversary of the Manchester martyrs was celebrated in Dublin by a very large and representative procession which started from Stephen's Green about 1 o'clock and marched to Glasnevin cemetery. The day was a beautiful one and the route along which the procession passed was thronged with spectators.

At a recent petty sessions court at Burnfoot, County Donegal, District Inspector Yeates, R. I. C., was summoned for riding his bicycle on the footpath. The complainant, a civilian named McNutt, said the cycle frightened his horse and he sustained damages by the animal bolting. Yeates admitted riding on the footpath, excusing himself on the ground that the road was rough, but was fined.

At Gurteen, County Galway, James McCulla, steward and manager of Lord Ashton's Woodlawn estate, was charged at the prosecution of Lord Ashton with embezzling monies, obtaining monies by false pretenses and making false entries in his accounts, with intent to defraud. The arrest and prosecution have created a sensation in Galway. The investigation was adjourned till December 8 at Ballinasloe.

The inquiry into the prison treatment of Timothy Flanagan, J. P., was terminated at Limerick before Charles E. MacDermott, Inspector of Prisons, after an investigation lasting all the week. Dr. Woodhouse, medical member of the Prisons Board, was examined, with Alderman O'Brien, who said he, as Deputy Mayor, visited the prison and found Flanagan and others well. They made no complaints.

We regret to announce the death of Joseph Delany, which took place at his residence, at Blanchardstown. He was a successful city merchant and was owner of the extensive flour mills at Blanchardstown and several stores, including those in Thomas street, Talbot street, North Kings street, Camden street, Dorset street, Kingstown and others. Delany figured prominently in horse breeding and racing circles.

An inquest was held at Enniskillen on the body of James Dolan, a civil bill officer, who was killed at Enniskillen railway station by a passing train. It appeared from the evidence of a man who was with deceased on the day of the occurrence that he had drunk tank and fell on the line. He was discovered just after a goods train had passed over him and died shortly after. The jury found that death was caused by shock and that the occurrence was purely accidental.

After speaking at a compulsory purchase meeting of farmers and laborers in Dromore, County Down, Mr. Russell was violently assaulted by a gang of rowdy organized landlord sympathizers and struck on the head with a stone. The honorable member will be laid up for some days as the result of the injuries he received. The Under Secretary has promised an inquiry into the affair. Insufficient police precautions, it seems, had been taken for the preservation of the peace.

A disastrous fire, and one of unusual dimensions and destructiveness, broke out in Dromore, County Down, resulting in the complete destruction of Messrs. John Hamilton's hemstitching factory. When the fire was discovered it had gained a firm hold on the premises and, despite every effort, continued to spread until the factory was gutted. The damage, estimated at about $50,000, is covered by insurance. A large number of workers will be temporarily deprived of employment owing to the fire.

The tragic death of Andrew Moloney, victualer and pig merchant of Ennis, created a painful sensation there when it was reported that his dead body was seen in Ennistymon river. Sergeant McMillon and Constable Wood took the body out of the water. Coroner Cullinan held an inquest in the evening. The evidence showed that Moloney went to Ennistymon fair from Ennis, and that he did not return home. There were no external marks on the body. The jury returned a verdict of an accidental drowning.

occurred after a brief illness, will be heard with regret by the numerous friends which his courteous and genial manner gained for him, and has occasioned genuine sorrow amongst his colleagues, with whom his many amiable traits of character caused him to be held in the highest esteem. Mr. Clifford, who was for twenty-one years connected with the post-office, had during that time entrusted to him many onerous and responsible duties, and was one of the most efficient and trusted officers of the Cork branch of the department.

We regret to announce the death of Sister Catherine, of the Vincentian Order, daughter of the late James Franklin, of Cork. Sister Catherine was well known in Cork, having been stationed for many years at the North Infirmary. Here her skill and attention proved of great assistance to the medical staff, and her bright, cheery manner brought many a ray of comfort and consolation to the poor sufferers in that institution. After seven years in Cork she was removed to St. Vincent's Home, Dublin, where she passed away. In her religious calling she passed twenty-one years, during which she edited all with whom she came in contact.
